THE TRADE TOKENS OF TEXAS

HISTORY OF THE TEXAS STATE SEAL

During the revolutionary period of 1836, the provisional government of Texas used a simple home-made seal. The impression of this seal on documents in the State Archives appears to be an eight-petaled daisy. On March 12, 1836, the Convention at Washington-on-the-Brazos adopted a resolution — "That a single star of five points, either of gold or silver be adopted as the peculiar emblem of this Republic." After the Texas Republic was established, an act submitted to the First Congress was passed and approved on December 10, 1836 providing "that for the future the national seal of this republic shall consist of a single star, with the letters 'Republic of Texas,' circular on said seal, which said seal shall also be circular."

This seal, when finally obtained, had a varied career following its official use. Just prior to the War between the States, F. M. Trimble found the seal at his farm near LaGrange in Fayette County, and used it as a handy tool to drive back tacks in boots and as a pecan cracker. Later it was presented as a gift to Mrs. W. D. Ellis of Menard County, "who always had a high regard for historic things." Finally, one hundred years after its origin the seal won first prize as the most interesting historical exhibit at the Texas Centennial celebration. Reproductions of the seal are now used on the publications of the Texas State Historical Association.

On January 25, 1839, President Mirabeau B. Lamar approved the Anson Jones' bill, which amended and stated that "from and after the passage of this act, the national arms of the Republic of Texas be and the same is hereby declared to be, a white star of five points on an azure ground, encircled by an olive and live oak branches" and the "the national great seal of this Republic shall from and after the passage of this act bear the arms of the nation . . . and the letters 'Republic of Texas'." The star was emblematic of the Republic, the olive branch of peace, and the live oak indigenous to Texas, of strength and fertility. It will be noted that the amendment added the olive and live oak branches to the seal of the Republic, described in the act of December 10, 1836.

The first recorded drawing of the seal of the Republic was made by Peter Kreg, an artist, who on January 15, 1839, was paid eight dollars for his draft of the seal and ten dollars for drawing the new national flag — the famous lone star banner that still flies over Texas. These drawings were approved January 25, 1839 by President Mirabeau B. Lamar.

The Constitution of the State of Texas approved August 27, 1845 provided that there shall be a seal of the State, "which shall be kept by the Governor and used officially." The said seal shall be a star of five points, encircled by an olive and live oak branches and the words "The State of Texas." This was the official seal when Texas was admitted to the Union on December 29, 1845 and has never been changed.

In 1876 the present constitution was adopted changing the custody of the seal from the Governor to the Secretary of State.

The Trade Tokens of Texas

Historical Backdrop

The trade tokens of Texas reflect much of the history of the Lone Star State during the period 1875 to 1935, give or take a few years at either end.

Through these small pieces of metal, fiber, and vulcanite, we can trace the growth and development of this great State almost from the days of the Republic, 1839-45, through the deep depression of 1929-33, and into the economic expansion of the Roosevelt years. The material increase in the available supply of small change and currency during the middle 30's, the extension of the rural free delivery mail service, and better and faster transportation into the larger towns and cities combined to put an end to the day of the token; but not before it had contributed significantly to the economic well-being of the State.

The tokens earliest in general use in Texas probably were the saloon tokens. Liquor by the drink was a best seller from the earliest days of statehood, 1845, until the Volstead Act lowered the boom on the open saloon in 1918. Saloons were plentiful, and competition was keen. As early as the 70's and 80's, saloonkeepers in towns along the Chisholm trail were giving southbound drummers handfuls of their tokens to distribute among the thirsty cowhands driving the huge Longhorn herds north to the railheads in Abilene and Dodge City. This same spirit of competition probably accounts also for the variety and beauty of the ornate pictorial tokens issued by rival liquor establishments in the last two decades of the last century.

About this time, the "two for a quarter deal" became quite popular in better saloon circles. A single drink was 15¢, but if a customer was willing to accept a token in his change he was given a "chip" "Good for 12½¢ in Trade" or "Good for One Drink", thus assuring his continuing patronage. The 2½¢ denomination also was frequently used, and was given in change along with a silver dime.

There were also special denominations for the beer drinkers. Keg beer selling at two glasses for 15¢ brought on the fairly rare 7½¢ denomination, and the "four for a quarter" beer deal resulted in the equally rare 6¼¢ token.

These odd denominations also offer mute evidence of the Spanish and Mexican influence on Texas history. Long after Texas had won its independence from Mexico, and until well up in the 1870's, the Spanish milled dollars and the Mexican 8 reales pieces circulated as the prime medium of exchange in many sections of Texas. As is generally known, the smaller Spanish and Mexican coins - 4, 2 and 1 reales — were not common and the more plentiful 8 reales coins were often physically cut into halfs, quarters, and eighths to meet the demand for small change. The eighths were dubbed "bits", and so the quarter size became "two bits", the half "four bits" and so on — terminology that still is a part of our everyday language.

In several instances, early Texas tokens used the "one bit" instead of the more conventional "12½¢" as the denomination. At least one piece, issued by the Bexar Hotel Bar in San Antonio, simply depicts a fancy horse bit on the reverse of its attractive aluminum token to indicate the denomination. Very few Texans experienced any difficulty in determining the value of this token. The 6¼¢ denomination mentioned above was a "half-bit" token. It was most often used on Spanish language tokens as the denomination was equivalent to a half real.

The Spanish influence is found also in the place names given many Texas token issuing towns — Los Ebanos, Roma Los Saenz, Rio Hondo, Salineno, and Ramirito — to name a few. Likewise, the Spanish language tokens bearing such musical inscriptions as "Bueno por 6¼¢ Mexicanos", "Bueno por una copa" and "Bueno por 10¢ en efectos" remind the Texas collector of his cultural inheritance from Mexico and her mother country. These tokens were generally issued along the Rio Grande; but they are also found from towns with heavy Latin populations many miles north of the border.

The impact of German immigration on the history of early Texas was quite substantial, and also is told in her trade tokens. German colonization began in the 1840's, and perhaps the best known story is that of Prince Carl of Solms-Braunfels who established New Braunfels in 1845 — along with that of the splinter group under John O. Meuseback. This group pushed on into the Comanche country and settled Fredricksburg the next year. These towns, and other in Central Texas, have preserved their old world traditions and have annual events celebrating their heritage.

The continuing stream of sturdy German immigrants after the Civil War and through the 80's and 90's was, however, of greater significance to the growth of Texas than were the earlier, more colorful, colonizers. These people, fleeing from the distress conditions of Central Europe, landed at Indianola, Rockport, and Galveston and spread inland to become successful farmers and ranchers, craftsmen, builders, and merchants. They have left their mark in the names of the towns they settled: Breslau, Oldenburg, New Baden, Manheim, Neiderwald, Walburg, Weimer, Schulenburg, and many others; and given their family names to the business establishments they operated, so that the Boettchers, Gerschs, Hempels, Joekels, Vogels, Busches, Marburgers, and Schmidts are as well known to Texas token collectors as are the Jones and Smiths.

The Bohemians came along with the Germans. While not in as great numbers, they were perhaps more inclined to the merchandising field. Praha, Flatonia, Ammonsville, Nechanitz, and Granger are listed among the many predominantly Bohemian towns in Texas, and Polasek, Hruska, Marek, Palma, Drodz, Oltjen, Bartosh and Smaisteria are a few of the names appearing on Texas tokens.

There are other ethnic groups contributing to the Texas story — the Swedes, the Poles, the Italians, and the Danes, among others. Their tracks also are plainly visible to the collector in the names given to their towns and their businesses, but their numbers were not great and their influence did not rival that of the Spanish and Mexicans, the Germans and the Bohemians.

The immigrants from Central Europe became the storekeepers of Central Texas, and contributed heavily to the Texas token story. They were grocers, bakers, general storekeepers, dry goods merchants, and proprietors of other retail businesses, and their token output constitutes the largest single category of Texas tokens. They were a thrifty people. They found in the token a device that gave them a slight edge on their competitors, and they made full use of it. Some used the small denomination tokens as handouts to stimulate trade and bring customers into their stores; others bought eggs, poultry, farm produce of all kinds and paid 10% more in trade than in cash, paying in tokens to assure that the trading would take place at the proper location; white still others used the tokens as a bookkeeping device, advancing a sum in tokens to be repaid when the customer ginned his cotton or sold his cattle — thus avoiding the necessity of itemizing credit purchases every time the customer came to the store.

There are two other categories of Texas tokens that deserve special mention. They are the lumber company tokens of East Texas, and the piece-work tokens issued by the shearing crew capitans in the large semi-arid sheep-raising area of Southwest Texas.

In sheer volume, Texas lumber company tokens will probably run fairly close behind retail merchandising and saloon tokens even though the lumber industry was confined largely to East Texas in a relatively small area. Lumber industry tycoons established lumber camps and sawmill towns everywhere, cut the timber, and moved on to new locations. Company commissaries advanced tokens against weekly and biweekly wages, and loggers with extravagant tastes or large families often found themselves in the same situation as the man in the song who complained that he owed his soul to the company store.

The commissary system came in for much unfavorable criticism in the 1890's, and the Texas Legislature moved in to protect the workers against the evils of the system. In 1897, a law was passed stating that all wages, due and payable weekly or monthly, should be paid in lawful money of the United States. Again, in 1901, the Legislature enacted a law making it illegal to issue any ticket, check or token obligatory to any employee redeemable in goods or merchandise.

These laws were later declared unconstitutional, but apparently were ineffectual even while in force as there was no letup in the use of the tokens. They did, however, result in some companies abandoning the time honored designation "Good for $1 in Merchandise — not transferable" in exchange for "Time Check No. 100", "Good for 50¢ in time", or similar wording designed to camouflage the true use of these tokens.

Because of the frequent extablishment and abandonment of the sawmill towns, there are many ghost town lumber tokens. These are constantly coming to light, and they present a continuing challenge to the collector to identify the location and sometimes the company itself. Several of the tokens listed here fall in this category in spite of diligent research efforts on the part of the compilers.

Texas has its share of "piece-work" tokens. These are tokens used primarily in agricultural pursuits where the worker is paid by the number of units accomplished rather than for the length of time worked. There are tokens for picking berries or fruit, for gathering vegetables, for plucking turkeys, for use in the packing and canning plants in the citrus belt, and for other purposes. Some of the most interesting of the piece-work tokens are the sheep-shearing tokens used by the shearing crews working out of Del Rio, Uvalde, Sanderson, Rock Springs, and other Southwest Texas towns.

The Edwards Plateau country west of Austin and San Antonio is high and dry. There is some irrigation, and in spots there is grass enough to support range cattle, but in the main this is sheep and goat country. Much credit for the success of this industry must go to the shearing crews and to the intrepid Capitans like Alejandro Marquez of Sanderson, Gilberto Bejarano of Del Rio, and Fermin

Reyes of Uvalde, who recruited, trained, and supervised the crews, and attended to all of the business connected with the trasquila or sheep-shearing operation. Theirs was a job of planning, organizing, controlling, and directing that would challenge any modern captain of industry.

The shearers, or tacinques, are given a token "Good for one sheep", for each sheep sheared (three for a buck because they are harder to handle), and these are traded in for tokens in denominations of 25, 50, or 100 sheep so that the tacinque will not become weighed down with tokens.

So — from this brief historical backdrop — we can see that the Texas trade tokens we uncover today lead us, with a bit of research, into the paths of yesterday. With them, we watch Texas develop from its pioneer stages into a mighty rural empire dominated by cotton and cattle. And, with their obsolesence, in the middle decades of the twentieth century, we witness the rapid transformation of Texas from a predominantly rural to one of the most urban states of America.

As Texans left the countryside and the small towns for the cities, the economic and cultural institutions common to rural America began to disappear. The family farm, the one room school, and the general store that supplied everything needed "from the cradle to the grave" were typical victims of the population shift. And, as these rural institutions passed from the scene, there passed with them a pleasant and less-hurried way of life than we know today. In some instances, the only tangible evidence that these institutions once existed may be the tokens they issued — remnants of our rural heritage that survived the culture they represent and the era of which they were a part.

Arrangement and Design

The Texas tokens catalogued in this document have been listed after the manner popularized by Mrs. C. B. Allen in the "Mavericks" section of the TAMS Journal. The style is so well known to collectors that we feel it unnecessary to describe it here. The slight deviations we have made are, we believe, self-explanatory.

The tokens are listed alphabetically by name of the town or city of the issuing firm, and again alphabetically by name of the firm. Where tokens in series are identical except for the denomination, we have listed the full legend on the reverse of the lowest denomination token, and listed the others as "Same except" and given the denominations.

Varieties, if minor in nature such as differences in punctuation, ornamentation, or the like, have been noted simply by stating "two varieties" and so on. If, on the other hand, the varieties exist because of significant changes in wording, lettering, or other features, we have given full descriptions.

The tokens listed here have been personally identified by one of the compilers, or else the information has been obtained from sources believed to be entirely dependable. In order to preserve the integrity of the listing, we have included only those tokens on which we have reliable information even though this has resulted, in some instances, in the listing of incomplete sets. In some cases tokens are known to have existed, but the information on them is incomplete. We have given the information we have on these tokens in an "Also Known" section at the end of the catalogue.

Coverage

Several knowledgeable collectors have made estimates of the numbers of Texas tokens issued, ranging from a few to many thousands. The only thing we are sure about, however, is that new ones (new in the sense that they were not previously known to collectors) are continually turning up; and all indications point to the likelihood of there being as many yet undiscovered tokens as have been found and catalogued.

Certainly, the listing presented in this document is far from complete. We believe the reader will, however, find it to be a representative listing and one fairly comprehensive as to the categories, styles, shapes, sizes, materials, inscriptions, and denominations of Texas tokens.

Moreover, it is a beginning. It provides a basis on which students, researchers, and lovers of Texana can contribute their time and talents to build a greater knowledge and further enrichment of this particular chapter of Texas history.

Contents — and Exclusions

Trade tokens and advertising cards issued by retail stores and service establishments — the types of exonumia generally categorized as "merchants' trade tokens" — comprise the bulk of the material listed in this document.

Although Texas is rich in military tokens, we have excluded all except a few of the rarer ones in our collections because James J. Curto has covered this field quite well in his Military Tokens of the United States. Practically the same situation holds with respect to Texas transportation tokens and Atwood's Catalogue of United States and Canadian Transportation Tokens. We have not consciously listed any Texas transportation tokens listed in Atwood's Third Edition.

We also have excluded anniversary pieces issued by banks and other private establishments, as well as those issued by municipalities or other governmental entities. Likewise, we have excluded wooden nickels, encased pennies, good luck pieces, car wash and parking tokens, and similar items of exonumia. Some of these items are included, however, if they also served as a token or a pure advertising card.

We also have excluded from the listing all known bogus tokens. Unfortunately, there have been several counterfeit pieces released in the Houston area within recent months; but these fakes are obvious, and generally well known to collectors.

Most of the tokens listed were issued prior 1940. Tokens issued since that date have been listed if known actually to have been used in a trade or business. We have tried to note in each such instance that the token is of recent vintage unless that fact is evident from the legend on the token itself.

Notes and Sketches

In preparing the listing, we have attempted to share with the reader many of the intriguing bits of information picked up over the years in the process of building our collections. This may be a bit of news about the tokens themselves, for example to call attention to an odd denomination or an unusual configuration; a brief historical sketch on the issuing firm or family; a note of interest on the operation of the business itself; or, in some instances, a little-known or unique story about the community where the business was located.

These informational items are scattered at random throughout the entire listing. If they pertain to a particular token, or set of tokens, they will appear immediately following the token or tokens to which they relate. Notes of wider applicability, such as those concerning a community or an industry, generally will appear at the end of the alphabetical listing for the tokens of the town or city involved.

Pricing

After a great deal of consideration, we abandoned the idea of establishing a rarity table and went, instead, to a direct pricing scheme. There is today a fairly wide variance among the prices being paid for tokens of different kinds. It would be most difficult, consequently, to translate a rarity table for a general listing into a valid price guide.

On the other hand, we have been actively buying Texas tokens in the open market for several years whenever and wherever they have been available — from set price lists, mail bid sales, flea markets, coin dealers, and other sources — and feel our knowledge of the market is good enough to assure a valid current price list. The prices used are considered to be the fair market retail price, which is the price a willing buyer will give and a willing seller will take in an arm's length transaction.

The fact that a token may not have been included in this listing and, consequently, may later be denoted as "Unlisted" should have no significant impact on its price. It is likely that we have failed to list some quite common tokens simply because they were not included in any of the collections available to us. Quite a few of the tokens given in the "Also Known" section of this study probably fall into this category.

The prices given here are, of course, subject to change. The price of Texas tokens has risen rapidly within the last two years, and likely will continue to increase so long as the general economy is on the upswing, and the number of collectors holds steady or grows. The prices current at the time this document is published should, however, provide collectors with a basis for estimating fair prices for some time to come.

Acknowledgements

To our wives — Lynda, Betty, and Shirley — whose tolerance level made it possible, we dedicate this study of the trade tokens of Texas.

To Shirley Strough Robbins, who gratuitously prepared the draft for us, we express our grateful appreciation.

And to the many other fine people who have helped us in so many ways — by allowing us to catalog all or parts of their collections, by turning up hard-to-find tokens or tracing down elusive bits of information, by providing expertise in their particular specialty fields, or by simply lending their understanding, encouragement, and support — we give our sincere thanks. This list includes: E. A. Arnim, Flatonia; Fred Baldwin, Marshall; Bill Burleson, Mart; Joe Davis, Huntsville; Percy Curry, Mart; Charles Downing, Eagle Pass; T. L. Epperson, Trinity; C. J. Fossati, Victoria; Luster and Margie Hobbs, Cedar Creek; Bob Medlar, Lubbock; Henry Reidling, Dallas; Mrs. Fermin Reyes, Uvalde; E. M. Rice, Austin; Joe and Betty Rogers, Austin; and Jim Ruhland, Vidor.

Finally, we want to acknowledge our indebtedness to the TAMS Journal for making it possible for us to share the results of our collecting efforts with so many others in the same community of interest, and to the Journal's gracious editor, whose advice and encouragement gave us the incentive to undertake and complete this study of the Texas trade tokens.

Now a thriving town of nearly 1,000 people, Agua Dulce (Sweet Water) was a village of less than 200 when M. M. Wallace operated a general mercantile store there in 1914. And it was only a crossroads in 1836 when a small band of Texians under Dr. James Grant was almost completely wiped out by the Mexicans only four days before the attack on the Alamo. It was another in a series of consecutive defeats suffered by the Texians before final victory at San Jacinto.

Originally known as Brown's Mill, the village changed its name when Brownsville protested the similarity of the names. The postman, often asked to purchase small articles in town for the villagers, placed a small box at a convenient place where they could deposit their requests, with the money-plus a dime for the service. Hence the name — Dime Box.

The Eagle Pass water tokens point up the magic value of water in a dry country. Although not listed consecutively, the three tokens, as listed, fall in proper sequence as to age. The Eagle Pass Water Service Company is the oldest, followed by the Rio Grande Water and Power Company, and the Texas Mexican Electric Light and Power Company. Today's Central Power and Light Company is the successor company.

Goliad is one of Texas' oldest settlements. The Spanish established the Mission Espirito Santo here in 1749, and nearby built the Presidio Santa del Loreto de La Bahia. Here in 1836, Colonel Fannin and 342 men surrendered to General Santa Anna and were massacred in violation of the terms of surrender. "Remember Goliad", "Remember the Alamo" became the rallying cry used by the Texians as they ended the Revolution a month later at San Jacinto.

Most mavericks are called by that name because the location designation is omitted. This one is the only Texas maverick known where the location is given but the issuing business is not designated. Hackberry, now defunct, is listed as having had three businesses in 1933. This leads to the possibility that the tokens may have been a joint venture of the firms operating there at the time they were issued.

In 1890, Toulmin Cleveland opened the 66 Saloon at 66 Main Street and remained in business until 1917. Renowned for its strong cultural leanings, the celebrated and immaculate "66" was one of the best places in Houston to keep in touch with the arts. "Nana", then accepted as the Mona Lisa of the classical nudes, was one of the many famous paintings that hung from its white tile walls.

Good For/ One Loaf Breod — A-Rd-29 — 5.00

The Scholibo token is a relic of one of Houston's oldest businesses. Charles F. Scholibo, a German immigrant, founded the business in 1847 when the State of Texas was one year old. The first oven he built was still in use in 1955 when the bakery closed its doors and the old building at 1708 Franklin Street was razed. The tokens were issued before 1900. They sold 24 for a $1.00 making bread cost 4-1/6¢ a loaf.

This historic East Texas town blossomed in the 70's when, as a major river port, its population reached 35,000. Then in 1882, the City Father's refused railroad tycoon Jay Gould's request for a downtown right-of-way. Angry, he stalked out of the meeting, paid his hotel bill, and wrote "The End of Jefferson, Tex." across the register. It nearly was. The day of the steamboat passed. Today Jefferson is a sleepy little town of 3,500, basking in the Texas sun, and dreaming of the days that were — and of what might have been.

Kristenstadt was founded in 1930 as an agricultural-industrial community called "socialistic" by some, but based on "pure Americanism" according to its founder John B. Cristiansen. Land was owned and farmed individually, but village industries were operated on a communal basis during slack periods. Workers were paid $2.00 a day, in tokens, exchangeable for supplies at the community-operated, non-profit store. Unfortunately, the depression killed the market for both farm and manufactured products. The post office closed in 1935, the school failed to open for the 1938 term, and Kristenstadt — an utopian dream — was dead.

Langtry was the location of the "Jersey Lily" Saloon, so-named by its proprietor, Judge Roy Bean, because of his admiration for the famous English actress, Lily Langtry. The peculiar combination of shrewdness, audacity, unscrupulousness and humor which made up the character of Roy Bean, aided by his ability to dramatize himself, made him a legend in his own time — The Law West of the Pecos.

These tokens are unusual in that the names of the town and state appear on the reverse. Also, although this is a multi-shaped set, two denominations — the 10¢ and 50¢ — are the same shape and size. Seemingly, this would negate the purpose — ready recognition — of having the tokens in different shapes.

The berry pickers tokens from Lindale, near Tyler, are mute evidence of a flourishing commercial berry growing business in that area during the early part of the century. Smith County strawberries, blackberries and dewberries were as well known then as the Tyler roses or Pecos cantaloupes of today. These "piece work" tokens were given out as the pickers turned in the berries they had picked, and were cashed in at the end of the week — usually Saturday noon. In 1930, the pay for picking was about 25¢ a crate (24 units), but varied according to the kind and size of the berries. The tokens were readily accepted by the merchants of the area in trade at the going rate.

MOBEETIE

Gaod For One Drink/ Gea. B. Berry & Ca./ Mabeetie, Texas
(ELEPHANT ON MOUND) Wm-Oct-27 Rare

Mobeetie, Indian word for Sweetwater, was the first settlement in the Texas panhandle. First known as Hidetown by the buffalo hunters, it was established as a trading post one mile from Fort Elliott in 1874. George Berry came from Kansas to this settlement on Sweetwater Creek and opened a saloon and dance hall. Bat Masterson and Temple Houston both lived in Mobeetie in the early days. It was here that Bat put the first notch on his pistol in a gun fight over a girl. Temple was Sam's youngest son, born in the Governor's Mansion in 1860. He was made district attorney over the vast Panhandle district at the tender age of 18.

Originally called Long Prarie, the Nechanitz store was purchased by Wenzel Matejowsky in 1867, and renamed for his home town in Bohemia. The original building was 125 years old when it burned in 1971. It was rebuilt and is still being operated by the Matejowskys. The original store housed the post office which, when it was abolished in 1954, was reported to have been under one family longer than any other in the United States.

It was an unusual "Bank" that issued tokens "good for 10¢ in merchandise"; however, many of Texas' early banks evolved from the rural general stores. It was an easy step from advancing credit by means of tokens to lending money for repayment with interest.

These are among the older tokens in this listing. Mr. Umland drove a freight wagon on the old New Orleans — San Antonio road and later operated a saloon at Round Top, one of the primary stops on the route. When the railroad by-passed Round Top in the early 1880's, he went to Carmine and went into the general mercantile business with his son-in-law, E. W. Hoppe (see Carmine listing).

The letters J.R. counterstamped on these tokens are the initials of Joe Rivera who bought out the Rubio and Alvarez "trasquila" (shearing operation) in 1936.

Originally called "Strawbridge", Sanderson was established in 1880 as a stop on the Texas and New Orleans railroad. A typical frontier railroad town, it was infamous for its population of outlaws, gunmen, renegades and rustlers. Roy Bean operated a saloon here before moving to Langtry to become the "Law West of the Pecos".

Serbin was founded in 1854 by a group of about 500 Wends, a Slavic people who had settled in Germany and who left there because of official interence with their Lutheran faith. Of the 558 who left Germany in September, there were 73 who died of cholera during the three month voyage to Texas. The Wends were an industrious people, and the village of Serbin thrived until by-passed by the railroad in 1871. It gradually declined, and today all that remains is a beautiful rock church which was erected by the Reverend John Kilian and his congregation before the Civil War.

In 1896, young Wallace Speegle of Taylor, then 18 years old, sold his horse for $100.00 and opened a grocery with the proceeds. As the business prospered, Wallace took his brothers into the business; Joe, Frank, Pierce, then Fred. When the depression hit in the late '20's, Fred and Wallace owned the business comprised of two groceries, a meat market, and a bakery in Taylor and a grocery in Granger. At the height of the depression, they daily made a large iron wash pot full of soup and fed hundreds of poor people. The last Speegle store, a grocery, closed its doors in 1972.

Velasco, at the mouth of the Brazos River, is one of Texas' most historic cities. Here in 1821 the first of Stephen F. Austin's colonists landed from the good ship "Lively". More than 25,000 entered here during the 1821-35 period. The first battle of the Texas War for Independence was fought here on June 6, 1832. The Treaty of Velasco, ending the War, was signed here in 1836 while Velasco was serving as temporary Capital of Texas. Velasco has now merged with the City of Freeport and has lost its individual identity.

The Fossati tokens are arranged according to date of issuances. The first was issued in 1895, the last-a slot machine token — in 1934. Fossati's is a Victoria institution. It has been in continuous operation since the early 1890's, and in the hands of the Fossati's until a couple of years ago when C. J. Fossati, son of the founder, retired. A combination cafe, delicatessen, and saloon, Fossati's holds a firm spot in the affection of all staunch Victorians.

Hall's is a beer and domino place. The tokens are recent one's, having been in use from 1957 to 1972 when the City of Victoria asked Hall's to stop using them because they clogged up the parking meters. Although the tokens are recent, the way they were used reaches quite a way back into Texas folkways. The loser paid 10¢. The house got 5¢, and the winner got a 5¢ token.

Although it was common practice for rural general merchants in the Texas cotton belt to double as cotton buyers, these tokens together with those issued by O. S. Alexander of Dale, Texas, are the only known tokens to advertise this fact.

The Wiedeville tokens are perhaps the most widely circulated Texas tokens. All tokens have a common obverse, and all denominations are the same size and shape. The tokens are nearly always found in bright uncirculated condition. In addition, there is an unusual 15¢ denomination. This set of circumstances, plus the fact that no one had located Wiedville, led several years ago to a widely spread rumor that the tokens were counterfeit. This rumor has now been put to rest. Wiedeville's location has been found (near Brenham in Washington County). And C. Wiede's descendents have verified the authenticity of the tokens.

50¢/ In Trade A-Rd-32 7.50

Zapata, originally called Carrizo, was settled about 1770 by residents of Revilla (Guerrero) Mexico, who owned land on the north bank of the Rio Grande River. The historic site of Zapata was flooded when Falcon Dam was built, and Zapata was rebuilt on higher ground immediately north of the old location.

"ALSO-KNOWN" TEXAS TOKENS

In this section, we are listing Texas tokens that are known to exist, but on which our date is insufficient to justify inclusion in the catalog. Any information that fellow collectors may supply of these tokens, or on any other Texas tokens either listed or unlisted in this catalog, will be gratefully received and used to supplement the catalog at a later date. This information may be sent to any one of us. Our addresses are given in the TAMS Journal Membership Roster.
